FOR NATIONAL SECURITY—

Army Air Support Center

BY BRIG. GEN. G. J. HIGGINS, USA
Director, Army Air Support Center

"THE mission of the Center will be to assist, in any and every way, in providing the best possible air support for Ground Forces." With this brief statement General Mark W. Clark, Chief of Army Field Forces, activated the Army Air Support Center at Fort Bragg, N. C., on 1 Oct. 1950.

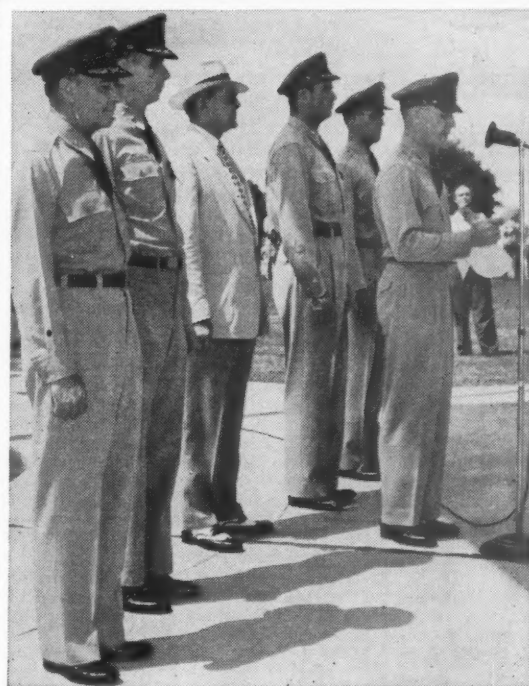

Brig. Gen. Higgins

For some time the Army had recognized the need for an effective agency to deal with air support matters essentially of a Ground Forces nature, and events in Korea clearly indicated that immediate action must be taken. Accordingly, the existing Air-Ground Operations Section of V Corps Headquarters, at Fort Bragg, was expanded into the Air Support Branch of the G-3 Section, Army Field Forces, and then into the Center proper. The six officers and seven enlisted men who comprised the old organizations were used as the nucleus of the new agency, with an authorized strength of thirty officers, one warrant officer, eighteen enlisted men and twenty-seven civilians.

At the present time the Center is organized into three departments of three sections each. The Training and Schools Department, headed by Col. A. H. Manhart, handles all matters pertaining to academic instruction for army personnel engaged in air-ground activities; provides officers and enlisted men to function with the Air Force in joint demonstration teams; and provides supervision for Army Field Forces units undergoing air support training. The Doctrine and Evaluation Department, under the supervision of Lt. Col. D. C. Clayman, advises the Director on matters pertaining to policy, operations research and development, air support doctrine and requirements of the air-ground operations system. The Administrative Department, headed by Lt. Col. J. F. Pearsall, takes care of personnel, records, publications, etc. The coordinator of all these activities, acting in the capacity of Center Executive Officer, is Lt. Col. W. A. Cunningham.

To the uninitiated, Air Support might appear to be only of concern to the Air Force, at least insofar as the delivery of effective fire on opposing enemy troops and material is concerned. However, a closer study of the subject quickly discloses that air support of ground forces

The passing of an era—Randolph Air Force Base, Tex., graduates the last class in the basic flight training program which began there in 1931 and has trained more than 20,000 military pilots. The facilities formerly used for this training are now being devoted entirely to the training of combat crews for bombers. At the last graduating ceremonies, 23 July, left to right: Maj. Gen. Warren R. Carter, USAF, Commanding General, Flying Training Air Force; Brig. Gen. Carl B. McDaniel, USAF, Randolph Base Commander; Brig. Gen. John C. Gordon, USAF-Ret.; Col. John H. Davies, Chief of Staff, Air Training Command, who represented Lt. Gen. Robert W. Harper, USAF, Commanding General, ATC; Lt. Col. Marvin H. Ahrens, ASAF, Commander 3510th Pilot Training Group, and, reading the orders over the microphone, Capt. Joseph N. Eberle, adjutant of the 3510th.

THE PAY FRONT

The House Civil Service Committee on 25 July agreed on new civilian government employee pay raises, retroactive to 1 July, giving a flat $320 a year additional to classified Civil Service employees and $420 a year to postal employees.

The Senate Committee approved a flat 8.4 per cent increase for all classified employees and 8.8 per cent for postal workers.

No action concerning pay of the Armed Services.

Protect Witnesses

A bill to protect members of the Armed Forces or other officers or employees of the government from being punished for testimony they might give before Congressional committees was passed by the Senate this week and sent to the House.

Such a move was discussed in 1949 when Admiral Louis Denfeld was relieved as Chief of Naval Operations following his testimony in the B-36 controversy. At that time the House Armed Services Committee report termed his removal as a "reprisal," stating, "This act is a blow against effective representative government in that it tends to intimidate witnesses and hence discourages the rendering of free and honest testimony to the Congress; it violated promises made to the witnesses by the committee, the Sec-

House Group Studies Reenlistment Pay

A House Armed Services subcommittee, headed by Representative Paul Kilday (D-Tex.), has initiated action to remove the long-standing inequity regarding reenlistment bonus payments to certain members of the Army and Air Force.

Meantime, Congressman Kilday has declared that an omnibus bill of amendments to the Career Compensation Act is being whipped into shape. However, he said it is not known at this time whether hearings can be held during the present session of Congress. Apparently, even if hearings cannot be held before adjournment, Mr. Kilday wants at least to introduce the bill during the present session for early action in 1952.

The Kilday subcommittee was slated to launch hearings yesterday, 27 July, on H.R. 3366, a bill introduced in March by Mr. Kilday himself, aimed at the removal of an unintentional reenlistment bonus inequity which resulted from passage of the Career Compensation Act.

The Department of Defense supports the reenlistment bonus bill, although Department states that it does not favor piecemeal amendments to the Career Compensation Act.

It is known, however, that the reenlistment bonus problem is one of the most serious problems created by the Career Compensation Act and its solution dur-

Tax Relief Backed By Majority Leader

Senate Majority Leader Ernest W. McFarland (D-Ariz.) introduced a bill this week to reestablish the $1,500 a year special military tax exemption granted during World War II. Under his measure the exemption would apply during any war or national emergency.

Senator McFarland told THE JOURNAL that he will appear before the Senate Committee on Finance and urge prompt favorable action on his proposal.

Early this session Senator Herbert H. Lehman (D-N. Y.), introduced a bill to grant Service personnel a $600 a year exemption plus $100 for each dependent in addition to the spouse. Co-sponsors with Senator Lehman were Senators Hendrickson (R-N. J.), Humphrey (D-Minn.), Kilgore (D-W. Va.), and Magnuson (D-Wash.). Subsequently, this group appealed to Senator George (D-Ga.), chairman of the Finance Committee, to consider their

Washington Daily News—"Anger is justly stirred because GIs and their families are being cruelly gouged by extortionate rents for miserable housing in the vicinities of military bases . . . surely a Government which can fritter away literally billions on doubtful and debatable projects—a Government which talks constantly of "human" needs—can afford, and is obligated, to make it possible for its fighting men and their families to live like human beings."

Minneapolis Tribune—"If decent housing cannot be made available to these men and their families, and if the rent gougers cannot be controlled, then the camps should be moved to the localities which do not confuse patriotism with the opportunity for quick and easy profits. Decent housing is basic to good morale. When we tolerate any other kind, we pay a heavy price in the bitterness and cynicism of those who have been called upon to make the sacrifice of military service."

Buffalo Courier-Express—"The report very properly called on the Department of Defense to do everything within its power to alleviate the conditions set forth and to recommend remedial legislation to Congress . . . Men called to the service of their country have every right to decent quarters for their families and to protection from shameless profiteers."

New York Herald Tribune—" . . . the legal rathole most responsible for the soldier rent-gouge racket is that which permits a property owner who converts (after February, 1947) a non-housing structure to a housing building to charge whatever rental the traffic will bear. It is by taking advantage of this defect in the law that an unscrupulous property owner can put a door on a chicken coop, call it a house, and extract an outrageous rental from a desperate serviceman who can't find a real house for his family . . . Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, Jr., announces that he has a program for meeting the situation, and he intends to submit it to the Department of Defense for action. Certainly some plan must be translated into deeds—into actual, livable homes—immediately. The present situation is intolerable."

The Washington Evening Star—"There is no excuse for profiteering at the expense of men suddenly called to the defense of the Nation . . . However, it is not fair to blame the communities adjoining the re-activated camps for the lack of housing that developed after Korea. The shortage was inevitable under the circumstances . . . local authorities can help to relieve conditions by enforcing sanitary regulations, exposing profiteering and applying rent controls wherever possible. The problem . . . is one which requires a fine degree of co-operation between camp officials and the residents of adjacent towns."

The Washington Post—"The housing defense bill now before Congress would permit the FHA to resume the insurance of mortgages on houses built on leased land at military reservations, and enable the Government itself to provide essential housing where private industry fails to do so . . . The bill is still in the House Banking Committee awaiting a green light. Unless it is soon taken off the shelf, a large share of the flame for the inadequate housing of servicemen as well as of defense workers will have to be laid at the door of Congress."

THE WAR IN KOREA

WITH the exception of sharp fighting on a relatively small scale near the extreme eastern end of the line, ground combat in Korea this week was largely confined to light contact of opposing patrols. Near the east coast town of Kansong a well-entrenched enemy battalion stubbornly resisted efforts of South Korean units to dislodge it from high ground.

Adverse weather interfered with Allied air operations, but whenever possible Allied land planes and carrier-based aircraft carried the air war to the enemy, attacking troop concentrations and supply lines. There was little enemy air activity, but a formation of U.S. Marine planes had an inconclusive brush with a flight of Red jets, 60 miles south of the Manchurian border, with no apparent damage to either side.

A Peiping broadcast claimed that a flight of seven Allied fighter planes penetrated deep into Manchuria and that six of the seven were shot down. The Department of the Air Force denied this report, declaring that it had no information of any such action or of losses of Allied planes.

Naval shelling of enemy positions, particularly along the east coast, continued throughout the week. Heavy damage to shore batteries, bridges, marshalling yards, and supply points was reported.

Air observers continue to note heavy movements of Communist reinforcements and supplies to front line positions. There has been a marked increase in enemy artillery and some Red tanks have arrived at the front. The Chinese Communist troops have long suffered from a deficiency in artillery and armor, and apparently are taking advantage of bad weather which hampers Allied air operations to remedy their shortages.

Speculation continues as to the possibility of a new offensive by the Reds in the event that current truce negotiations are broken off. The Allies are guarding against such an eventuality and apparently are prepared to meet any threat.

The Defense Department this week estimated that enemy casualties from the beginning of the war through 13 July 1951 had reached a total of 1,213,544. This is an increase of 10,616 since the last previous estimate through 4 July. It is interesting to note that during the nine days covered by this estimate the armistice negotiations were under way and fighting was light, but the Red losses averaged more than 1,000 a day.

Of the total casualties 611,091 were sustained by the North Koreans and 602,453 by the Chinese Reds. There were 374,000 North Koreans classified as killed or wounded, 91,000 sick and injured, and 146,091 prisoners of war. There were 506,000 battle casualties among the Chinese Reds, 79,000 non-battle casualties, and 17,453 prisoners of war.

In the ground fighting in Western Korea this week United Nations patrols probing northwest of Korangpo-ri reported light contact with enemy units of squad and platoon size. A limited local attack was launched northwest of Yonchon by small enemy units, supported by artillery and mortar fire. The attack was repulsed. Another attack by an enemy platoon west of Chorwon was also repulsed.

Enemy units up to company size were dispersed by Allied patrols northeast of Kumwha and south of Kumsong. No enemy contact was reported in the area south of Pyonggang.

Light to moderate enemy resistance was encountered north and northeast of Yanggu from units of company size. There was also light contact with the enemy north of Inje. The opposition of the Reds along most of the central front during the week was extremely light.

On the other hand, the enemy reacted strongly to South Korean probing attacks on the eastern front, northwest of the port town of Kansong. Here an enemy battalion, holding strong hill positions, stalled the advance of South Korean troops for several days. In this area the enemy launched several unsuccessful small-scale counter-attacks.

Bombardment of east coast ports of North Korea by surface units of the United Nations fleet was intensified during the week, despite a heavy fog which much of the time prevented accurate determination of results. The fog also interfered to considerable extent with operations of carrier-based Naval and Marine planes.

The British Cruiser Kenya joined the Allied warships pounding the enemy-held port of Wonsan, firing hundreds of six-inch high explosive shells at shore batteries. Other ships firing on enemy positions at Wonsan were the U.S. Destroyers O'Brien, Hubbard, Blue and Weiss, and the Colombian Frigate Almirante Padilla. Bridges, marshalling yards, gun positions, troops and supply centers were hit. The Destroyer Blue hit a warehouse which exploded, and set three other buildings on fire north of Wonsan. The U.S. Rocket Ship 409 fired hundreds of projectiles at enemy artillery south of the city.

The U. S. Destroyer - Minesweeper Thompson hit railroad cars loaded with ammunition in the marshalling yards at Tanchon, 20 miles south of Songjin. Large secondary explosions were observed. Bridges, railroads, and highway transport at Songjin, Chongjin and Chuuronjang were shelled by the U. S. Destroyers Cunningham, and Hubbard and the British Frigates Morecambe Bay and Mounts Bay.

Near the battle line on the east coast the U.S. Destroyer Bradford supported South Korean troops attacking the enemy north of Kansong. The destroyer registered a heavy barrage on enemy troops and supply buildings. In a night attack the warship blasted enemy mortar positions along the coast. Ineffective return fire came from shore batteries.

Flying from the U.S. Heavy Carriers Princeton and Bon Homme Richard off the east coast, Navy flyers, piloting Skyraiders, Corsairs and Panthers, dealt heavy blows at enemy supply lines, destroying or damaging bridges, vehicles, railway cars and buildings. South of Kojo Navy airmen attacked 150 enemy troops, convoying 50 supply-laden oxen. At least one-third of the troops and many of the animals were killed.

Marine planes launched from the U.S. Light Carrier Sicily off the west coast of Korea made concentrated strikes on enemy installations in the Chinnampo area. Marine Corsair pilots destroyed numerous buildings and attacked entrenched enemy troops with excellent results. The Sicily also provided spotter planes for the Australian Frigate Murchison during bombardment of enemy positions along the west coast west of Songhwa. During this shelling an enemy medium tank was destroyed or seriously damaged. Return fire by shore batteries was ineffective.

Air Force bombers and fighters carried out continuous assaults on enemy troops and supply and transportation facilities throughout the week. Bad weather hampered but did not halt air operations, and, whenever clearing skies permitted, visual bombing was carried out with good effect.

Striking persistently in support of ground patrols in Eastern Korea propeller-driven F-51 fighter-bombers inflicted hundreds of casualties on the enemy. In the central sector F-51 Mustangs cut highways and rail lines to prevent Communist troop and supply movements along lateral lines of communications.

B-29 Superforts from Japan and Okinawa attacked marshalling yards at Sariwon, an airfield southeast of that town, and a supply center at Kyompo.

THE EUROPEAN THEATER

LONDON—One does not talk with many people here without becoming aware that in Britain there are most decidedly two minds about the Spanish-American proposal, upon which Admiral Sherman had performed the basic work just before his untimely death last Sunday.

The military in Britain (and in France), it is apparent, are far better aware than anyone else of the strategic importance of Spain in the Mediterranean theater. As a result, there is in those quarters a complete understanding of the U. S. Navy desire for access to Spanish ports, both on the Mediterranean and Atlantic sides, and for the development near these ports of airfields; to think that in any grand-scale conflict, employing post-World War II weapons, there would be any adequate substitute for such resources is to take a very light view of naval requirements in that area. The need is not for near-control of communications but full control. For in the words of an experienced naval observer, the Mediterranean is not a region to be divided among several controls; it is one sea, and effective control of it must be lodged in one command. This of course explains the Navy's grant to Admiral Robert B. Carney of so wide an area of administration—covering U. S. Naval forces not of the Mediterranean area, but of the eastern Atlantic as well, and of the waters beyond Suez all the way to Ceylon.

Against this fairly solid military judgment, wholly sympathetic with American strategic views on the desirability of Spanish bases (plus certain other contingent advantages) there is ranged the hostile judgment of a good many civilians, apart from those in Government itself. They remain unalterably opposed to Franco on the basis of his Nazi-Fascist activities before and during World War II, and the circumstance that to this day his political opponents are jailed. It is a respectable view and it is not "sentiment." It is worth recalling that the British loyalists in the Spanish war were organized as the Clement Attlee brigade. It is a solid reminder that for Premier Attlee today to relax in opposition to the Spanish Caudillo, for whatever reason, would split his party from top to bottom and upset the present Government. Mr. Attlee has troubles enough now.

Much the same sort of thing is true in France where—even without this complication thus far—there is a great deal of difficulty even in forming a government.

M. Petschke having confessed failure after a week's effort and turned over the task to M. Mayer. With the new Government presumably forced to take a stand on the Catholic-education aid measure, with one of the Middle Parties (the Socialists) totally opposed to it and another (MRP) absolutely insistent upon it, and with a Middle-Party Government all but impossible without including both of them, it is obvious there is nothing easy about forming and maintaining a new Government. It is just as well not to bring up the Spanish issue at this time.

For our own part, however, Mr. Truman's remarks appear to indicate a firm intention of proceeding with the bilateral negotiations as undertaken by Admiral Sherman. There is regret that they must be merely bilateral, for certainly in an enterprise calculated to be of infinite value to the North Atlantic Treaty Organization as a whole it would be desirable to have the official and expressed support of our Allies as well, or certainly to avoid having some of our most valued Allies in announced opposition on any subject at all. There is in some quarters an impatience with our Allies, and a feeling that countries which have been so "realistic" in the past (it might sober us to remember some of our own Allies in both World Wars) can afford to be realistic this time. One feels that they will be in time.

This week has been marked by a lively struggle within the Labor Party itself on a kindred issue—i.e., the British rearmament program. The effort to trim the defense budget is led by Aneurin Bevan, lately dropped from the Government by reason of his unwillingness to meet Mr. Attlee's program in other respects. It was accompanied as usual by Bevan's fierce denunciation of the United States, an issue upon which it sometimes is difficult to tell exactly how far to the Left are Bevan's moorings. It was equally difficult during the war. It is surprising to the outsider to see how considerable is the vote which is controlled by this ill-tempered opponent of almost everything that the United States supports. But it is a fact which Mr. Attlee has to cope with in his calculations, and awareness of this circumstance ought to make us a little less querulous with that much-harassed Prime Minister.

bombing both visually and with radar. The targets were hit with 100-lb. and 500-lb. high explosives. Good results from the visual drops were observed. The medium bombers experienced some flak, but encountered no enemy aircraft, and none of our planes was damaged. Other B-29s joined B-26 light bombers in striking enemy front-line positions with airbursting quarter-ton anti-personnel bombs, utilizing radar techniques.

Fifth Air Force Shooting Star F-80 jets hit rail yards and bridges at Kangdong, east of Pyongyang, damaging a bridge and destroying rolling stock. Rail bridges in the Kunu-ri area were hit. F-84 Thunder Jets successfully attacked enemy flak positions at the Sunan airfield, and also damaged rail tracks near Hwangju.

Night-flying B-26 light bombers, aided by radar, struck enemy airfields at Hwangju and Yongyu, and the marshalling yards at Sopo, north of Pyongyang. Other night flyers of the Air Force and Marine Corps patrolled enemy supply lines, attacking convoys of vehicles. They were aided by flare-dropping transport planes. Three Allied aircraft were lost to ground fire.

Commands Ryukyus Hospital

Col. Samuel A. Cohen has assumed command of the Ryukyus Army Hospital and the 8114th Army Unit on Okinawa, replacing Col. Walter H. Stevenson, who is being medically evacuated to the United States.

Colonel Cohen arrived on Okinawa from Camp McCoy, Wisc.

DIVISIONS IN ACTION

Eighty-eight of the 90 World War II divisions were committed to action. Their troops took more than 3,500,000 prisoners during combat.

Would Limit General and Flag Ranks

The Senate Committee on Armed Services, while reporting favorably on the block of nominations before it, this week called upon the Department of Defense to formulate and present legislation setting limits on the number of officers that may be given temporary promotions to general and flag rank.

The committee pointed out that the Army and Air Force have no statutory limitation on the number of temporary general officers they may appoint, but that the Navy has a statutory limit of .75 per cent of the total officer strength. The Navy now has 266 such officers, which is only .4 of its authorized strength. The Marine Corps has 52 general officers, the Army 482, and the Air Force 333. The Committee said that it believes the .75 figure to be too high.

The nominations reported, and which were scheduled for consideration on the floor yesterday, are those submitted between 22 May and 19 July which were held up by the jam of work caused by the investigation of General MacArthur's dismissal.

Housing Report Aftermath

In the wake of last week's turbulent report on housing conditions for service personnel, Senator Thomas C. Hennings, jr. (D-Mo.) introduced two bills on 24 July to prevent rent gouging of military personnel and to provide decent living accommodations for service men and their families.

The first of the bills (S-1893) is an amendment and extension to the Housing and Rent Act of 1947 recontrolling all types of housing accommodations in critical defense housing areas, including motor courts, trailer courts, hotels and new construction and conversions.

The second measure (S-1894) would provide a means of expediting the construction of military or civilian housing projects vital to the national defense where private enterprise is unwilling or unable to undertake or finance such projects from an investment standpoint.

Senator Hennings, in a speech on the Senate floor, said that he had read every word of the Senate Preparedness Subcommittee's report on substandard housing and rent gouging of military personnel and that he was "appalled and ashamed" at the conditions described.

Meanwhile, Senator Kenneth S. Wherry (R-Nebr.), criticized the House of Representatives for its failure to pass the extension of the Military Housing Act containing title VIII, known as the Wherry Act, which would permit builders to obtain concessions to build needed housing projects for the families of military men. He said "there is only one way to solve this housing problem, and that is to permit the construction of housing projects on or adjacent to military bases."

In the House this week, legislation (HR 4914) authorizing certain military construction for fiscal 1952 was ordered reported by the House Committee on Armed Services. The bill, however, contains only an insignificant amount for housing. Figures contained in the bill, a revision of HR 4524, include: For Army—$1,368,025,528, compared with almost one billion, eight million in the original bill; for Navy—$786,267,600, compared with $1,130,753,830; and for the Air Force—$3,480,661,800, as compared with $3,521,480,000. Additionally, there has been included, under Title IV, $133,766,000 for items classified and unclassified for all the Services. The same amount was in the original bill.

The revised bill provides a reduction of $792,541,459 over the original bill, the total of which was $6,561,262,387. It calls for an expenditure of $768,720,928.

At Fort Meade, Md., Second Army Headquarters reported that housing for families of military personnel "is acute at most installations in the Second Army area." Thousands of Army families, the announcement said, have been forced "to live in substandard housing and pay exorbitant rents in some cases." At reactivated posts, such as Camp Pickett, Va. (mentioned in the Subcommittee's report) and Camp Breckinridge, Ky., "it has not been possible to provide adequate facilities for all families of service personnel,"

Second Army said, pointing out that the Wherry Act "does not permit the building of permanent housing facilities at temporary posts."

Randolph Shifts From Basic To Combat Crew Training

Randolph Air Force Base, Texas, known for 20 years as the "West Point of the Air," graduated its last class in basic flight training this week and turned its entire efforts to an intensive program of training combat crews for medium bombers.

A colorful ceremony in front of the famous "Taj Mahal" headquarters building was held 23 July for the last basic class of 89 cadets. Because most of the graduates will go on to multi-engine cadet training at Reese and Vance Air Force Bases, it is likely that many of them will return to Randolph to become co-pilots in the B-29 crews now being trained there.

Maj. Gen. Warren R. Carter, commanding general of the Flying Training Air Force with headquarters at Waco, Tex., delivered a brief address to the graduating cadets, reminding them that there were representatives of more than 20,000 pilot trainees from the United States and 22 other nations who completed training at Randolph since the basic course was established there in 1931. General Carter was introduced by Brig. Gen. Carl B. McDaniel, commander of the Base at Randolph, who was assigned there last July to implement the change-over.

Both Generals Carter and McDaniel are closely associated with the history of Randolph, for General Carter was assistant director of flying when the base opened up training in November 1931 and General McDaniel was one of the first flying instructors. Also present at the review and ceremonies was Brig. Gen. John C. Gordon, USAF-Ret., one of the first pilot trainees to enter the course in 1931 and who is now chairman of the Military Affairs Committee of the San Antonio Chamber of Commerce.

Col. John H. Davies, Chief of Staff to Lt. Gen. Robert W. Harper, represented his Air Training Command at the review and spoke to the cadets at a luncheon following graduation.

The Combat Crew Training Program has been underway since last July when it was hurriedly started to furnish crews to the Strategic Air Command's B-29's in Korea and other parts of the world. The demand for crews has grown so great that it was found necessary to transfer the aviation cadet basic training load to nine new civilian contract pilot schools being opened by the Air Training Command and devote Randolph's fine facilities to the crew training. The combat crew program is constantly expanding and it is expected that it will reach its peak load by 15 Sept. 1951.

B-29 combat crew training at Randolph involves the assembly and training as a unit of "combat-ready" bombardment crews. The airplane commanders, navigators, bombardiers, radar observers, and pilots are officer personnel, most of them from the reserve component and recently recalled to active duty.

The pilots, or co-pilots as they were formerly called, are mostly recent graduates of the Air Training Command multi-engine cadet schools at Vance AFB, Enid, Okla., and Reese AFB, Lubbock, Texas.

The flight engineers usually come to the combat crew school from Chanute AFB's school for airmen of this specialty.

The radio operators usually come to Randolph from training at Keesler AFB, Miss.

The scanner-gunners and the tail gunner usually are assigned to aircrew training from the Lowry AFB gunnery school in Colorado.

The central-fire-control-gunner is often a reservist, graduated from Air Training Command schools earlier in his career.

The airplane commander, pilot, engineer, and scanner-gunners arrive at Randolph first and spend 30 days or more in learning to operate the B-29 safely. Meanwhile, the crew's bombardier, radar observer, and navigator are in refresher courses at Ellington, Mather, and Connally AFB's. The 11-man crew is assembled for the final 60 days of training. This training consists of eight simulated combat missions ranging from seven to 14 hours in length.

These simulated missions are designed to test and extend the abilities of each crew member in the problems of getting a bomb carried to its target and returning the bomber to its base. Instructor crews ride with the student crews to check and instruct. Ground school training supplements the air practice.

The missions involve a three-day cycle each. On the first day of this period, the crews are briefed. This begins with two hours of target study with the various crew members of each of the six-to-sixteen bombers scheduled for the mission assembling in small rooms with other men of like specialties. The navigators of all of the crews, for instance, gather and work out the problems of the mission. All of the radar observers are in another room, studying aerial maps and 'scope photos. Then all of the crews assemble in a large briefing room to have the whole picture of the mission explained to the group.

The next day is for the mission. There are several targets on each mission—some to be hit with practice bombs, others to be photographed through a bomb-sight camera, and others to be located by radar. On the latter type of target, a radar bomb scoring team on the ground tracks the bomber on its "run" and evaluates its bombing proficiency when a "bombs away" signal is flashed from the aircraft.

One of the missions near graduation closely simulates combat conditions: The student-operated B-29's from Randolph leave the base at about midnight, heading for Brownsville, Texas. From this point they start out across the Gulf of Mexico for the Florida coast, simulated "enemy" territory. At a point off the coast of Florida, the bomber stream climbs to bombing altitude and strikes targets along the peninsula, getting mock fighter interception from the Jacksonville Naval Air Station. After "bombing" Tampa, the Randolph Superforts head out across the Gulf again for the Texas coast, reaching home not less than 14 hours after their takeoff.

The crew receives a critique the day after each mission with instructors offering suggestions and evaluating mock bombing results.

Those graduating from Randolph's last basic training class and the stations to which they will report for advanced training are:

ARMY

Integration in Far East

The Army has announced plans for carrying to completion the integration of Negro personnel, which is already in progress, in all combat units of the Far East Command.

This integration will be phased over a period of approximately six months. A similar integration program will be applied to service type units.

In order to achieve more efficient utilization of manpower, the 24th Infantry Regiment, whose enlisted personnel are now entirely Negro, will be inactivated. The 24th Infantry Regiment is part of the 25th Infantry Division. An integrated regiment will be substituted for the 24th Infantry Regiment in the 25th Infantry Division.

It has been demonstrated, the Army said, that in combat in Korea Negro soldiers serve more effectively in integrated units.

Gen. Parker To Europe

Maj. Gen. E. P. Parker, USA, The Provost Marshal General, will depart from Washington by air on 3 Aug. for about 30 days of temporary duty in Europe, during which he will observe military police and provost marshal activities. He plans to visit the headquarters and major installations of the European Command, United States Forces Austria, and SHAPE. Accompanying General Parker will be Lt. Col. Robert M. Allgeier, a member of the Training Division, The Provost Marshal General's Office.

Move JAG School

The Army Judge Advocate General's School, now at Ft. Myer, Va., will be transferred to the University of Virginia at Charlottesville in the near future. The relocation is necessary for expansion of school facilities. It is anticipated that about 300 student officers will be trained in the first year of operation.

Commandant of the Judge Advocate General's School is Col. Charles L. Decker.

Heads Tripler Eye Service

Col. Austin Lowrey, Chief of Walter Reed Army Hospital's Eye Clinic since 1946, has left for assignment as Chief of Tripler Army Hospital's Eye Service in Hawaii. His successor, Col. John H. King, who is now Chief of Tripler's Eye Service, is expected to arrive at Walter Reed in August.

Appointed USMA Professor

Col. John D. Billingsley was nominated this week by President Truman for appointment as Professor of Ordnance, United States Military Academy, West Point.

New Army Course

A non-resident Command and General Staff College Course for Reserve and National Guard officers has been announced by General Mark W. Clark, Chief of the Army Field Forces. The Special Associate Course, to be administered by commanders of the Continental Armies, requires three years for completion and parallels the 12-week resident Associate Course offered at Fort Leavenworth, Kans.

This course, prepared at Fort Leavenworth, is divided into three one-year phases, each of which consists of a series of Army extension subcourses followed by two week of resident instruction at locations to be determined by each Army commander.

Individuals who wish to enroll in the Special Associate Course may apply at any time through their appropriate commanders or instructors to the headquarters of the Army area in which they live.

Reporting date of 14 Sept. for the next 12-week resident Associate Course at the Command and General Staff College, Fort Leavenworth, also has been announced. Applications for attendance should be submitted to Army commanders through appropriate command channels.

Medical Research Duty

Lt. Col. Maxwell Dauer has been assigned to the Medical Research and Development Board, Army Surgeon General's Office. Colonel Dauer has been on active duty at the Toxicity Laboratory, University of Chicago.

Colonel Dauer's past assignments include the Manhattan Project of the Atomic Energy Commission and Commanding Officer of the Army School of Roentgenology. He is also the only Army officer certified as Radiation Physicist by the American Board of Radiology.

USMA Staff Changes

The conclusion of normal tours of duty at the U. S. Military Academy has resulted in several changes in the staff of the Superintendent at West Point.

Col. Ralph P. Eaton, who for the last three years has served as Staff Secretary at Headquarters, Caribbean Command, Quarry Heights, Canal Zone, will replace Col. Robert S. Nourse as the Academy's Adjutant General. Colonel Nourse will depart in September for his new assignment with Headquarters, Caribbean Command.

Col. Eugene C. Johnston has succeeded Col. Leo V. Warner as Assistant Chief of Staff, G-1, at the Academy.

Col. George L. Van Way has recently taken over the duties of Assistant Chief of Staff, G-4 at West Point replacing Col. Oren E. Hurlbut now on duty in the Office, Chief of Ordnance in Washington, D. C.

Tank Center Inquiry

Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr., has directed the Army Inspector General, Maj. Gen. Louis A. Craig, to investigate allegations of "irregularities" at the Tank-Automotive Center in Detroit, which is under command of Brig. Gen. David J. Crawford.

A House subcommittee headed by Representative Porter Hardy (D-Va.), holding hearings in Detroit, has been going into the operations of the Ordnance facility, which reportedly awards between $6 billion and $10 billion in contracts annually.

During the hearings, General Crawford testified that he had accepted free hotel accommodations in Washington, D. C., from Col. Ray Middleton, USA-Ret., a "good friend," and an agent of the Continental Foundry and Engineering Company of East Chicago, Ind.

General Crawford maintained that he had committed no "impropriety." The general declared that "if I have to renounce my friends to do this job, then I think it would be too much to ask. I believe the best interests of the Government were served and if I had it to do all over again, I would."

In Washington, Secretary Pace on 24 July made the following statement:

"I regret to learn of charges of irregularities at the Tank-Automotive Center at Detroit and that actions have been short of the high conduct required of Army personnel. The Inspector General of the Army has been investigating this matter since it was brought to my attention last week. As soon as The Inspector General's report is completed and all facts available to me, I shall immediately take appropriate disciplinary action with respect to any shortcomings developed or which may be brought to my attention as a result of the investigation or the hearings conducted by the Congressman Hardy Sub-committee.

"The Army appreciates having its attention directed to incidents where actions of its personnel are not in accordance with established high standards upon which we insist. The Hardy Sub-committee has been most helpful in this respect."

bill as an amendment to the Revenue Act of 1951.

The Finance Committee this week closed public hearings on the tax measure, but it is estimated that it will continue consideration of the bill in executive session for about another month. It is likely that the service exemption matter will be brought up, for Senator George promised Senator Lehman that he would bring the latter's bill to the attention of his committee.

Also this week, Representative James T. Patterson (R-Conn.), a member of the Armed Services Committee, introduced a bill to continue the present special tax exemptions for Service personnel in Korea. These exemptions will expire 31 Dec. 1951, unless action is taken. Under Mr. Patterson's bill the exemptions would also be extended to members of the Armed Services who are hospitalized elsewhere as a result of wounds or sickness incurred in the combat zone.

Mercators Set Speed Mark

Nine of the Navy's newest patrol bombers, P4M-1 Martin "Mercators" are believed to have set a speed record for planes of this type on one leg of a 6,500 mile coast-to-coast training mission.

A check of their flight logs following return to the Naval Air Station, Patuxent River, Md., on 22 July revealed that the 400-mile leg between San Diego and Alameda, Calif., was completed in one hour and 15 minutes.

The flight left Patuxent 15 July, stopping at Pensacola, Fla., San Diego, and Alameda. The leg from Alameda to the home base at Patuxent took about 13 hours.

The planes were from Patrol Squadron 21, under command of Comdr. R. G. Albright, USN, of St. Petersburg, Fla.

The P4M-1 "Mercators" have been in service about a year. They are powered by two piston engines and two jet engines.

Oppose Commodore Rank

The Defense Department recently reported that it opposes a bill (HR 2825) designed to provide that Naval officers who were recommended for promotion to the rank of commodore during World War II "shall be considered to have held such rank."

The report, submitted for the Department by the Navy Judge Advocate General, said there appeared to be "no justification for legislation which would benefit but one small group of officers."

The bill was introduced by the Hawaiian Delegate Joseph R. Farrington.

The Navy's report stated:

"During World War II the Navy did not set up billets specifically for the rank of commodore. Individual officers were recommended by their superiors for promotion to that rank on the basis of duties performed. The records of the Navy Department indicate that there were sixteen officers who were recommended for promotion to the rank of commodore and who were not so promoted. Of these officers eight were subsequently promoted to the rank of rear admiral while on the active list and would, therefore, not benefit financially by enactment of this legislation.

"A great many other officers in the Armed Forces were recommended for promotion to higher grades during World War II and for various reasons were not promoted as a result of such recommendations. There would appear, therefore, to be no justification for legislation which would benefit but one small group of officers.

"Accordingly, the Navy Department, on behalf of the Department of Defense, recommends against enactment of H.R. 2825."

Marine Generals Selected

President Truman on 19 July approved the selection of six general officers of the Marine Corps for promotion to major general.

They are Brigadier Generals: Thomas J. Cushman, Commanding General 1st Marine Air Wing, Korea; William O. Brice, Assistant Commanding General, 1st Marine Air Wing; Vernon E. Megee, Deputy Director for Intelligence, Joint Group and Joint Chiefs of Staff; John T. Selden, Commanding General, Troop Training Unit, Pacific Fleet; Walter W. Wensinger, Legal Aide to the Commandant of the Marine Corps; and Edwin A. Pollock, Director of the Division of Plans and Policies, Marine Corps Headquarters.

General Cushman, 56, enlisted in the Marine Corps in 1917, and was commissioned a second lieutenant the following year. In 1919, after completing flight training, he was designated a Naval Aviator. During World War II, he was Chief of Staff to the Commanding General of Marine Aircraft Wings, Pacific, from Sept. 1943 to May 1944, and was Air Defense Commander of the Marianas from November 1944 to April 1945. Prior to his assignment in Korea, he was Commanding General, Aircraft, Fleet Marine Force, Pacific. His decorations include the Legion of Merit and the Bronze Star Medal.

General Brice, who will be 53 in December, graduated from the Citadel, Charleston, S. C., and was commissioned a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps in 1921. Three years later he was designated a Naval aviator. During World War II, he commanded all Search and Bombing and Torpedo Aircraft at Guadalcanal, during the first U. S. offensive of the Pacific War, and later was Commanding Officer, Fighter Command, for the Commander, Aircraft, Solomon Islands Area. Prior to his present assignment, he was Commander, Marine Air Reserve Training. His decorations include the Distinguished Service Medal, Legion of Merit, Bronze Star Medal and Air Medal.

General Megee, 51 last month, served three years in the Marine Corps as an enlisted man before receiving his commission as a second lieutenant in 1922. Following flight training in 1932, he was designated a Naval Aviator. For his leadership of Landing Force Air Support Control Units on Iwo Jima and Okinawa during World War II, he was awarded the Legion of Merit and the Bronze Star Medal. At present he is one of three deputy directors of The Joint Staff, and the only Marine officer serving on a high policy level of the Joint Chiefs of Staff.

General Selden, 58, also served three years in the Marine Corps as an enlisted man. He was commissioned a second lieutenant in 1918, and served aboard the USS Huntington, on convoy duty, during the final months of World War I. As Commanding Officer, Fifth Marines, First Marine Division, Reinforced, during the battle of Cape Gloucester, New Britain, during World War II, he earned the Legion of Merit. Later, in the conquest of New Britain, he won the Bronze Star Medal, and he received a Gold Star in lieu of a second Legion of Merit for his services as Chief of Staff, First Marine Division, prior to and during action at Peleliu. Before his present assignment, General Selden was Deputy Commander, Marine Barracks, Camp Lejeune, N. C., and immediately prior to that was Director of Information for the Marine Corps.

General Wensinger, who will be 57 in September, was graduated from the University of Michigan in 1917 with an LL.B. degree, entered the Marine Corps as a private and was commissioned a second lieutenant the following year. During World War II, he was awarded the Navy Cross for his services as Commanding Officer, 23d Marines, Fourth Marine Division, during the Iwo Jima campaign. His other decorations include the Legion of Merit, Rol-Namur 1944; Gold Star in lieu of Second Legion of Merit, Saipan and Tinian 1944; and the Presidential Unit Citation with two stars, Saipan, Tinian and Iwo Jima. He has served as Legal Aide to the Commandant since February 1948.

General Pollock, 52, is a 1921 graduate of The Citadel. He was appointed a second lieutenant in the Marine Corps Reserve in July 1921, and in May of the following year accepted a permanent commission. During World War II, he won the Navy Cross during the Guadalcanal campaign, where he commanded the Second Battalion, First Marines. He was decorated with the Legion of Merit for service in the Cape Gloucester operation, and the Bronze Star Medal during the assault and seizure of Iwo Jima. He became Director of the Division of Plans and Policies in July 1949 after serving as Military Secretary to the Commandant.

retary of the Navy, and the Secretary of Defense; and it violated the Unification Act, into which a provision was written specifically to prevent actions of this nature against the Nation's highest military and naval officers." A minority group of this committee dissented, however, from this finding by the majority of the committee, holding that it was not supported by the facts.

The bill now passed by the Senate was sponsored by Senators Nixon (R-Calif.), Taft (R-Ohio), McCarran (D-Nev.), Wherry (R-Neb.), Schoeppel (R-Kans.), Bricker (R-Ohio), and McCarthy (R-Wisc.).

The committee made a number of minor amendments to the bill, one of which provided that witnesses so protected must have been testifying "by request of either House or committee thereof," saying that they did so to "obviate the possibility of any persons securing temporary immunity from discipline through the device of crashing a hearing."

The text of the bill as now before the House follows:

"That section 1505 of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by inserting '(a)' before 'Whoever' at the beginning thereof and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) Whoever being an officer of the United States or of any department or agency thereof causes or attempts to cause a witness, who is a member of the Armed Forces of the United States or an officer or employee of the United States or of any department or agency thereof, to be demoted, dismissed, retired, or otherwise disciplined on account of his attending or having attended by request of either House or committee thereof, any inquiry or investigation being had by either House, or any committee of either House, or any joint committee of the Congress, or on account of his testifying or having testified to any matter pending therein, or on account of his testimony on any matter pending therein, unless such testimony discloses misfeasance, malfeasance, dereliction of duty, or past reprehensible conduct on the part of such witness, shall be fined not more than $5,000 or imprisoned not more than five years, or both.

"The demotion, dismissal, or retirement (other than voluntary or for physical disability) of such witness within one year after so attending or testifying in such inquiry or investigation, unless such testimony discloses misfeasance, malfeasance, dereliction of duty, or past reprehensible conduct on the part of such witness, shall be considered a rebuttable presumption that such witness was demoted, dismissed, or retired because of such attendance or such testimony."

"Sec. 2. Section 1486 of title 18 of the United States Code is amended by inserting '(a)' before 'No' at the beginning thereof and by adding at the end thereof the following new subsection:

"(b) No witness, who is a member of the Armed Forces of the United States or an officer or employee of the United States or of any department or agency thereof, shall be demoted, dismissed, retired, or otherwise disciplined on account of testimony given or official papers or records produced by such witness, by request of either House or committee thereof, before either House, or before any joint committee established by a joint or concurrent resolution of the two Houses of Congress, unless such testimony is given or such official papers or records are produced in violation of law, or unless such testimony or the production of such papers or records disclose misfeasance, malfeasance, dereliction of duty, or reprehensible conduct on the part of such witness."

Officer Promotions

An Air Force board will meet at the Pentagon on Monday, 30 July, to consider USAF Headquarters majors and lieutenant colonels for temporary promotions to the ranks of lieutenant colonel and colonel.

This board will also review the recommendations from major commands for advancement of officers to these temporary ranks. On or about 20 August, a similar board will be convened for temporary promotions to major and captain. This board will recommend USAF Headquarters officers and review recommendations from the field.

Meantime, Air Force Special Orders No. 135, 12 July, announce the permanent promotion to the grades of lieutenant colonel and major of officers previously selected and confirmed by the Senate for advancement.

The list of officers promoted to the permanent rank of lieutenant colonel, with rank from 19 Oct. 1950, begins with the name of Willard M. Shankle, 4161A and concludes with the name of Reginald H. Mason, 4725A.

The list of officers promoted to the permanent rank of major, with rank from 14 Dec. 1950, begins with the name of Allen W. Stephens, 7309A and concludes with the name of John P. Foy, 8345A.

Air Ground School Deputy

Appointment of Col. Samuel T. Moore as Deputy for Air at the USAF Air Ground Operations School, Southern Pines, N. C., is announced by Col. William M. Gross, School Commandant.

Study Troop Carrier Base

Representative Paul J. Kilday (D-Tex.), Chairman of a Special Subcommittee of the House Committee on Armed Services, appointed to investigate the establishment of a base for two Air Force troop carrier wings, announced today that his Subcommittee would initiate the investigation next Monday, 30 July.

Mr. Kilday said that the group, consisting of himself, and Representatives Melvin Price of Illinois, O. C. Fisher of Texas, Dewey Short of Missouri, Charles H. Elston of Ohio, and William H. Hates of Massachusetts, would first visit Blackstone Air Base at Blackstone, Va., and then proceed to Greenville, S. C., Myrtle Beach, S. C., Wilmington, N. C., and Pope Field, Laurinburg-Maxton Air Base, Seymour-Johnson Air Base, and Raleigh-Durham Air Base, all in North Carolina.

Mr. Kilday further said that the subcommittee would be gone about three days and would attempt to make an on-the-spot investigation of each base with a view toward determining whether it would be feasible to reactivate or enlarge any existing base to be used as a home base for two troop carrier wings. The subcommittee would also study the question of whether or not such a base should be established.

The Air Force originally surveyed seven possible sites all in North Carolina, because of the proximity of Fort Bragg, and reduced the choice to one of three possible bases at Raleigh-Durham Air Base, Laurinburg-Maxton Air Base, and Seymour-Johnson Air Base. From these three, the Air Force finally recommended the Raleigh-Durham Air Base on the contention that it would provide more adequate private housing, better recreational facilities, more transportation, and greater post-emergency use than the other two bases.

The testimony before the Committee indicated that it would cost approximately $33,315,000 to establish the base at Raleigh-Durham, North Carolina, while the same base could be established at Laurinburg-Maxton for $24,430,000 and $27,000,000 at Seymour-Johnson.

Continental Air Command headquarters will be moved from Mitchel AFB, Hempstead, N. Y., to Grandview, Mo., some time after June 1953, according to present Air Force plans. Authorization for the move is in pending legislation but no funds have been requested for this fiscal year.

Department of Defense Public Works Bill for Fiscal Year 1952 would authorize $19,019,000 for construction at Grandview Airport, Kansas City, Mo. As previously announced this installation is scheduled also for activation for use by a fighter unit of the Air Defense Command and as a headquarters for Central Air Defense Force. Construction in connection with these activities is planned for fiscal year 1952.

Continental Air Command was organized in December 1948 to strengthen the Air National Guard and Air Reserve programs and is responsible for the administration and training of all U. S. Air Force civilian components. Maj. Gen. Willis H. Hale, USAF, has been in command since November 1950.

Headquarters of the First Air Force, a subordinate area Air Force of Continental Air Command, and an Air Force Reserve Training Center now stationed at Mitchel AFB, will remain there.

Test New Revolvers

Two thousand airmen are testing three different models of a lightweight, 38 caliber revolver as possible replacements for the 45 caliber automatic now in use, the U. S. Air Force has announced.

The models were developed to Air Force specifications by the Colt's Manufacturing Company, Hartford, Conn., and Smith & Wesson, Springfield, Mass.

The revolvers all use a two-inch steel barrel, but the frames and cylinders are made of lightweight, high tensile strength aluminum alloy. A six-shot revolver made by Colt's weighs 11½ ozs.

Smith & Wesson made two models, a five-shot, which weighs 10½ ozs., and a six-shot revolver, which weighs 14 ozs.

The 45 caliber automatic now used by airmen weighs two pounds and seven ounces.

What Do You Leave Your Widow?

Do you know that a Regular—officer or enlisted man—Marine or Soldier—Airman or Sailor—does not leave a pension to his widow but that a Reservist does, and that it may amount to as much as $525 monthly? The Regular may leave a small pension only on the basis of being a veteran. In your case would this be $42, $60, $75 monthly or nothing?

Do you know under what conditions a widow of a Regular on the retired list may not be entitled to any pension? Why is the rate of widow's pension the same for the recruit as for the highest ranking officer in the Service?

Are you fully informed regarding retirement for age and service—or disability—for the Regular, the Reservist and the National Guardsman? Do you know why the Reservist and the National Guardsman may collect two retirement checks concurrently — one from the Civil Service and the other from his military service while the Regular is specifically prohibited from doing so?

You will find the answers to these questions and many more, fully explained in PENSION & RETIREMENT RIGHTS. Send one dollar ($1.00) today for your copy to:

Air Support Center

by Air Forces is very definitely a joint activity and responsibility. Further, events in Korea clearly indicated the need for extensive joint experimentation and development. The choice of Fort Bragg as the home of the Army Air Support Center was most fortunate, as Pope Air Force Base, the home of the one Tactical Air Force in the Continental United States, is immediately adjacent. The proximity of the Ninth Air Force of the Tactical Air Command, and the Air Support Center of the Army Field Forces, enables those two agencies to work in close harmony. Matters of mutual interest are freely discussed and resolved whenever possible; exchange of instructors is effected in order to provide the most effective instruction in both unilateral and joint schools conducted at Fort Bragg, and both agencies contribute personnel and equipment to enterprises of a joint nature.

In addition to providing an operational, training, and development link between the Ground Forces and the Air Forces, the Army Air Support Center is vitally interested in improving the purely Army side of the Air-Ground Operations System. To that end the Center is presently assisting in reorganizing Aerial Photo Reproduction units, Air-Ground Signal Liaison units, and Air Photo Interpretation units. Resident instruction is being conducted at Fort Bragg for officers who will function in the Joint Operations Center, as well as for Ground Liaison Officers who will be stationed at fighter-bomber and reconnaissance airfields. Last but not least, the Center furnishes personnel, in an air support supervisory capacity, for all large-scale exercises and maneuvers.

Perhaps the most important, and certainly the most publicized, joint operation to date is the air transportable Joint Air Ground Training Program. This unique "flying classroom" criss-crosses the Z. I. in a comprehensive three phase program designed to teach the gospel of air support to all infantry and armored units of battalion size or larger, in addition to all fighter-bomber squadrons in the Tactical Air Command.

Beginning with JAGIT (Joint Air Ground Instruction Team), which indoctrinates tactical air and ground units with classroom instruction in the intricacies of operating a joint air-ground system, the three-fold program progresses through battalion field exercises simulating both air and artillery support, and culminates with a fire power demonstration of Air Force weapons used in support of the ground soldier.

To date, many thousands of key officers and enlisted men in the Army have viewed a field demonstration or participated in a tactical exercise in which fighter-bombers responded to a call and actually delivered air strikes in support of the attacking troops.

In the first few months of its existence, the Center has been particularly active in the field of joint endeavor. Indications are that this type of training is paying tremendous dividends in bridging the training gap—the most important shortcoming in our pre-Korean operations. Judging by these results, our air and ground forces in the future should possess the know-how and mutual confidence in the opposite service so necessary to success in battle.

Would Appoint Gen. Carroll

The Department of the Air Force has renewed its efforts to have Congress authorize a permanent regular commission for Maj. Gen. Joseph F. Carroll, AFUS, Director of Special Investigations, Office of the Inspector General. A similar bill, which also included Col. Bernt Balchen, failed of enactment in the 81st Congress.

In asking that General Carroll be commissioned a permanent colonel in the Regular Air Force, the Department stated: "General Carroll is an acknowledged expert in the investigative field and has rendered invaluable service in his assignment. It is strongly desired that he be permanently available to the military service through his appointment and retention as a Regular member of the Air Force."

Reenlistment Pay

ing the current session of Congress is highly desired.

Estimated cost of the bill would be $1,000,000 for the Army during the first year and about $570,000 annually thereafter. For the Air Force, the estimated cost is $768,900 for fiscal year 1950, $752,370 for fiscal year 1951 and for fiscal year 1952 and thereafter a maximum of $601,020 annually. The Navy and Marine Corps are not affected by the legislation.

The need for remedial action was told to the subcommittee in a Department of Defense report signed by Secretary of the Army Frank Pace, jr. In his communication to the House group, Mr. Pace said:

"Pursuant to the provisions of section 10, Act of June 16, 1942, as amended by section 4, Act of June 28, 1947, any person who had entered into an enlistment for an indefinite or unspecified period of time was entitled to an enlistment allowance of $50 for each year served in such enlistment. However, subsection 531(b)(34) of Public Law 351, 81st Congress, which became effective on October 1, 1949, repealed the provisions above cited and failed to include similar provisions in the new law. This condition has created certain inequities which it is believed were unintentional. For example, a technical sergeant reenlisted during November 1948 for a period of three years, and on July 15, 1949, he was given a "short" discharge for the purpose of reenlisting for an unspecified period. On October 1, 1949, the sergeant lost his entitlement to the reenlistment allowance of $50 for each year of complete service by the repeal provision of Public Law 351. However, he is not entitled to the $60 in advance for each year of service under an unspecified enlistment as authorized by Public Law 351, for the reason that his unspecified enlistment commenced prior to October 1, 1949, which was the effective and qualifying date specified in that Act.

"H.R. 3366, if enacted, would correct this and similar inequities. In the case mentioned, it would authorize payment of $110 to this sergeant which would include the $50 enlistment allowance for the period July 15, 1949 to July 17, 1950 and the $60 reenlistment allowance in advance for the period July 15, 1950 to July 15, 1951. Thereafter, the sergeant would be entitled to receive $60 in advance for each year's service, subject however to the limitations that the total amount paid shall not exceed $1,440.

"The Department of Defense does not favor the piecemeal amendment to the Career Compensation Act. However, due to the meritorious nature of H.R. 3366 and the large number of persons affected by the inequity which it would eliminate, the Department of Defense has no objection to the enactment of H.R. 3366."

The report calls attention to the fact that approximately 45 per cent of the foregoing initial costs had been provided for by law in effect immediately prior to enactment of the Career Compensation Act of 1949.

The report states that the Bureau of the Budget believes that a provision should be added to the bill which would provide for the recoupment of unearned bonus money when separation prior to completion of enlistment takes place if such separation is not due to physical disability incurred in line of duty or otherwise occasioned by circumstances beyond the control of the individual.

"The urgent and almost tragic housing problem which today faces the families of men in our Armed Services is one which calls for immediate solution if the morale of our fighting men is not to be impaired."
—REPORT OF SENATE SUBCOMMITTEE.

The Nation's Loss. The untimely passing of Admiral Forrest P. Sherman was a tragic loss to the Nation, but his contributions to the defense of the country will leave his imprint upon the pages of history and on the organization and strategy of the Armed Forces. His studious, retiring nature, as well as his solid, fundamental approach to problems was such that, although he was admired and respected throughout the Service, he was not too well known publicly when he was called upon in 1949 to replace the popular and well known Admiral Louis Denfeld. Despite the circumstances of his appointment there was not a time when Admiral Sherman was not able, by the force and sincerity of his character, to win a respectful hearing and a sympathetic consideration of the Navy's point of view. His World War II service as Chief of Staff to Fleet Admiral Chester W. Nimitz gave him a sound foundation for his position as a member of the Joint Chiefs of Staff, for he was the only member of that organization who had participated in the command of joint operations of the Army, Navy, Air Force, Marine Corps, and Coast Guard. His early pre-unification experience in working out the compromises that led to the National Security Act held him in good stead in his high position, for he knew the problems of the other services and, at the same time, he knew how to present the Navy's viewpoint to them. As Chief of Naval Operations he restored the Navy's sagging morale, he put a new ship building program on the statute books, he got back the big carrier that had been lost in earlier arguments, and, while not going all the way with the program of the Marine Corps enthusiasts, he publicly expressed the opinion that something should be done to bolster Marine Corps morale. If the inspiration of his level-headed, sound approach to defense problems inspires others to follow in his path, his contribution to the nation will be multiplied.

Income Tax Exemptions. It is heartening to note that Senator McFarland (D-Ariz.), majority leader of the Senate, has joined the forces seeking to persuade the Senate Committee on Finance to amend the revenue bill so as to grant some measure of relief to Service personnel in the matter of income taxes. While his support does not necessarily indicate that the Administration has reversed its position on military tax exemptions, it nevertheless can be a strong factor in securing a sympathetic hearing. Already, a bi-partisan group of Senators headed by Senator Lehman (DL-NY) has introduced a bill to authorize service tax exemptions and has appealed to Chairman George of the Finance Committee for its consideration. Senator McFarland's bill would restore the $1,500 military exemption given during World War II but taken away prior to the passage of the Career Compensation Act. The Lehman bill provides an exemption of only $600 a year plus $100 additional for each dependent exclusive of spouse. However, the important thing is to get the committee to take up the matter. Perhaps then it may be possible to establish an exemption adequate to provide a fair measure of relief and to extend it to all active and retired personnel.

Temporary Colonel's Policy

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Here's my gripe. The pattern should be similar to that of a great many army officers who were affected adversely by the promotions to temporary Colonel, dated 29 June 1951.

After being selected for a special assignment in 1942, I found myself stymied for promotion to Lt. Colonel for ten months because my unit did not have an approved Table of Distribution or a T/O&E. In 1946, I was reduced from the rank of Colonel because I was too young to continue to hold the rank. During 1947-50, I observed many officers who served under me during World War II being promoted over me solely because of age. That policy was changed early this year (just when it reached my age group and approximate promotion list number) for an announced policy that first consideration on the next promotions would be given to officers possessing these three qualifications: (1) Date of rank prior to 31 Dec. 44, (2) Former Colonel, and (3) Best qualified. However, the Department of the Army was not able to promote the entire list selected by the Promotion Board. Thus, the 29 June 1951 temporary Colonels' list leaves me in a position wherein hundreds of my contemporaries including officers of 4 to 5 years less service, but no better records, have been promoted ahead of me because of the stroke of fate in 1942 which resulted in a temporary date of rank a few weeks after 8 April 1943. I am informed that the Department of the Army may not promote any more temporary Colonels for at least a year because of lack of vacancies, therefore, the damage is permanent.

By not promoting the entire list selected by the Promotion Board, the Department of the Army has disregarded the qualification of "Former Colonel" in favor of "Temporary Date of Rank." It is generally admitted that both of these qualifications were established by "being in the right spot at the right time" during World War II. (I received my World War II promotion to Colonel as a result of combat). Nevertheless, it would seem that former Colonels should get precedence, among officers of equal service, providing the Promotion Board considered them as among those best qualified. Now that the damage is done, it appears that the only way to rectify the situation fairly is to give the remaining Colonels on the list, planes. In the combat crew training program, 11 men are trained as a unit to work together harmoniously and effectively to get the most out of a bomber. The same concept of teamwork extends to groups of bombers and groups of fighters, and on to the broad aspect of coordination and cooperation with other components of the national defense team. Whereas in the early years of military aviation, graduation from flight training was the principal objective, today the main aim is to train accomplished individuals to work together effectively to get the most out of the complicated and precise machinery produced by research and industry.

Problems of Integration

Editor, THE JOURNAL:

Your "Readers' Views" has been read rather completely ever since I've been a subscriber, and I should like to commend you for your choice of letters. I offer some observations to that column for your consideration.

So many of the conditions in which the writers find themselves appear to be inequities due to administrative policies and laws which, promulgated for the good of the service or for what seems to be best for the majority at the time, leave in their wake a small or sizable minority which discovers at a later date the deleterious consequences (to themselves) of these laws and policies. It is realized that in a large and tremendously complex organization, the eventual impact of changed policies cannot be foretold in all cases. That inability, however, should not rule out remedial action at a later date to rectify at least some of the unintended, but effective, penalties imposed.

A case in point is the recent ruling of the Veterans' Administration concerning educational rights as reported and commented upon in your issue of 14 July. Many of the officers thus affected were eligible for separation prior to integration. By remaining on active duty at a time when demobilization was severely impairing organizational efficiencies, they also forfeited a maximum of:

- Up to four months terminal leave (when leave was difficult to get) at the pay of the next higher grade;
- Transportation allowances to their home and return upon integration; and,
- The separation bonus.

The effects of changing promotion policies on personnel involved have been admirably and exhaustively commented upon in THE JOURNAL. To these may be added the somewhat untoward situation of an integrated officer who has been eligible for promotion to temporary or permanent major for less than three months since 1943 with the exception of the one-time adjustment round in 1948, though now a permanent captain for about four and a half years, a temporary captain for almost nine and a half.

Observer.

ALLIED and Communist representatives, meeting at Kaesong, late this week agreed on the agenda for Korean armistice negotiations, and proceeded at once to discuss the topics placed on the program. United Nations delegates secured the adoption of all their demands as to the subjects scheduled for discussion, while the Reds receded from their previous insistence that withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea be determined at the conference.

The agenda agreed upon provides for the following order of business: (1) adoption of the agenda, (2) establishment of a buffer zone between the opposing armies, (3) definite arrangements for ending the fighting, (4) arrangements for exchanging prisoners of war, and (5) recommendations to the governments concerned on both sides of the conflict. Presumably under the fifth point of the agenda the Communists would be able to argue in favor of a recommendation for the early withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea.

The United Nations delegation warns that adoption of the agenda does not assure success of the negotiations, since there is a wide variance in the views of the two delegations on some points of the program. The principal divergences are probably on the location and administration of the neutral zone, and the character of the inspection to assure observance of truce terms, as well as on the nature of the recommendations to be made to the respective governments.

Immediately following the agreement on the agenda the approved program was formally adopted, and the conferees began the discussion of the location and extent of the proposed demilitarized zone between the armies. This is a serious hurdle to be surmounted, since the Reds want the 38th parallel as the dividing line, while the Allies insist that it follow generally the present line. Once this point is satisfactorily settled less difficulty is expected with the other subjects.

After an interruption of four days Korean armistice negotiations were resumed at Kaesong on Wednesday, 25 July, with Communist delegates submitting a new proposal, relating to the point covering recommendations to the respective governments, which was accepted by the Allied negotiators. The four-day recess was taken at the request of the Communist delegates, who apparently sought new instructions from Peiping, and possibly from Moscow, covering the rejection by United Nations representatives of the Red demand that withdrawal of all foreign troops from Korea be placed on the agenda of the cease-fire talks. The Allied delegates, under instructions from the State and Defense Departments, insisted that troop withdrawal discussions were inappropriate for a conference of military leaders arranging an armistice, and should be reserved for consideration by a subsequent high-level meeting of diplomatic representatives.

In Washington Secretary of Defense George C. Marshall issued a statement supporting the position of the United Nations delegation, but said that if and when real peace is achieved in Korea the foreign troops would be removed as a natural result of the peace agreement. He commented that if the Communists were sincere in the desire for peace the withdrawal of foreign troops would pose no problem.

There were indications that the Communists were sufficiently anxious to end hostilities as to cause them reluctantly to waive their demand for withdrawal of non-Korean troops, and submit their new compromise proposal.

The items placed on the agenda are largely the same as those listed in Washington by Secretary Marshall who said there should be an agreement on a defensible line, no reinforcement of troops now in Korea, inspection by both sides to assure good faith and adherence to armistice terms, and a satisfactory agreement as to prisoners of war. While these items are on the agreed program it does not follow that the delegations are in accord on all aspects of these topics.

► THE ALLIES WILL AGREE to a neutral zone across the Korean peninsula, but will insist that it be based largely on the present battle line, rather than on the 38th parallel as proposed by the Reds. Except in the extreme west the present United Nations positions are well north of the parallel, and are much stronger defensively than any that would be available along the old boundary. The controversial parallel would not constitute the defensible line laid down by Secretary Marshall as an armistice condition.

Battling against tremendous odds Mr. W. Averill Harriman, special emissary of President Truman, has apparently made substantial progress toward settling the Anglo-Iranian oil controversy that has been threatening the peace of the Middle East for several months. Following the suggestions of the special envoy the Iranian government has agreed to a resumption of negotiations with Great Britain, which were broken off more than a month ago. Iran has stipulated that Britain must recognize the Iranian seizure of the properties of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company. This apparently Britain will agree to do. Both sides will probably also agree to Mr. Harriman's suggestion that a new company be formed by the former customers of the Anglo-Iranian Oil Company, mainly British, to transport and market the oil. However, Iran is reported to have balked at a proposal that this new company manage the oil wells and refinery for the Iranian government.

While there remain substantial areas of disagreement the Harriman proposals have provided a basis for negotiations which may lead to an early resumption of full production in the rich oil fields of Iran, and insure, for the present, at least, the maintenance of an uneasy peace in this restless corner of the world. The alternative might be the loss of an important source of oil to the western powers, economic chaos in Iran, increased anti-western agitation in Moslem countries, and the rise of Communism in the Middle East.

► THE ASSASSINATION OF KING ABDULLAH of Jordan late last week by a Moslem fanatic has menaced the stability of the Arab world. The sage potentate, who was slain as he entered the famous mosque of Omar in Jerusalem, was a steady influence throughout the Near East. He owed his accession to the British who subsidized his reign. His murderer, identified as a partisan of the former Grand Mufti of Jerusalem, deposed by Abdullah, was immediately killed by the king's guards.

Succeeding as regent of Jordan is Prince Naif, second son of the late monarch. The eldest son, Prince Talal, is under treatment in Switzerland for a nervous or mental disorder, and will be in line to ascend the throne if and when he recovers. The new regent is exceedingly popular throughout the kingdom. He is definitely pro-British and his permanent retention of control would be welcomed by the west. On the other hand, the erratic Prince Talal, heir apparent, is regarded as violently anti-British, and should he come into power the already muddled Near Eastern situation would be further unsettled.

► MARSHAL HENRI PHILIPPE PETAIN, hero of Verdun and traitor of Vichy, died in exile on lonely Ile d'Yeu, off the west coast of France, on Monday, 23 July, at the age of 95. The aged marshal, whose successful defense of Verdun made him the idol of France in World War I, collaborated with the Germans after the collapse of France in World War II, and at the close of the war was sentenced to life imprisonment for treason. He was released from prison a few months ago, but was too weak to leave the island where he had served his sentence. The French marshal's death followed by a few days that of former Crown Prince Wilhelm of Germany, whose army Marshal Petain had defeated near Verdun.

Brig. Gen. George H. Olmsted, USAR, Deputy G-4 for Foreign Military Aid, has returned to Washington from an extended trip to Mediterranean and Middle Eastern countries, during which he studied the progress of the military aid program for those countries. He expressed himself as well pleased with the progress of the program, particularly in Turkey and Iran. Local munitions production, he said, would soon be able to take care of many of the simpler items of the program, such as uniforms, web equipment, blankets, small arms, small-caliber ammunition and spare parts, while the United States would have to continue to provide the heavier equipment, including tanks, artillery, trucks and large engineering items.

Appointment of New Chief of Naval Operations—Guesses as to who will be named successor to Admiral Forrest P. Sherman as Chief of Naval Operations, were on every tongue this week throughout the Naval Establishment.

Mentioned most prominently were Admirals William M. Fechteler, Commander in Chief, Atlantic Fleet, and Lynde D. McCormick, Vice Chief of Naval Operations who is currently Acting CNO.

The most eligible officer as far as seniority goes is Adm. Arthur W. Radford, Commander in Chief, Pacific Fleet, but many observers discount his chances because of his opposition to administration policies during the B-36 controversy two years ago.

Second in seniority is Admiral Fechteler (who, prior to his current tour of duty, was Deputy CNO for Personnel); third is Adm. Robert B. Carney, Chief of U. S. Naval Forces in the Eastern Atlantic and Mediterranean (also an Air Force critic during the B-36 hearings); and fourth is Admiral McCormick, who has been working closely with Admiral Sherman on present Naval policies.

Some observers say that the President will not go down the ranks a second time to make the appointment. At the time of the dismissal of Adm. Louis E. Denfeld, the President selected Admiral Sherman over ten senior officers. These observers believe that Mr. Truman will by-pass Admiral Radford but that he will stop at the next senior officer, Admiral Fechteler. Known as an able administrator, Admiral Fechteler, like the late Admiral Sherman, has never engaged in any interservice bickering.

If a surface officer, such as Admiral Fechteler or Admiral Carney, is appointed to the job, Admiral McCormick, in accordance with a long-standing Naval custom, would have to be replaced as Vice Chief of Naval Operations. The two top Navy posts are traditionally held by an air officer and a surface officer. If Admiral McCormick is named to succeed Admiral Sherman, a Naval aviator will be named to the post of Vice CNO.

Service Legislation in House—Representative Carl Vinson (D-Ga), chairman of the House Armed Services Committee, told The Journal this week that, as soon as his committee work permits, he plans to appear before the Rules committee to ask for right-of-way on the floor of the House for the bill expanding the Marine Corps and making its Commandant a full-fledged member of The Joint Chiefs of Staff. He has introduced a resolution asking for the rule, but he states that his committee schedule has been so heavy that he has not had time to go before the Rules Committee in behalf of the resolution.

Having reported out the Public Works, authorization bill this week, the Committee will, on Monday, 30 July begin consideration of the bill for the reorganization of the reserve structure of the Armed Forces. This will be before the Brooks subcommittee. However, because that subcommittee consists of 17 members, only one less than a quorum for the full committee, it is hardly likely that the full committee will undertake any other major legislation until that bill is disposed of. The reserve bill will have a great number of witnesses, for there will be representatives of all the Armed Services to be heard as well as officials from the many Reserve, National Guard, and Veterans organizations who will wish to appear. When that measure is reported the committee probably will take up the bill for the establishment of an Air Force Academy. Thus, there is considerable doubt that the committee will get around to the Combat Pay Bill this session, even though that bill has been in Congress since early in January. Should it go over until the next session and a cease fire agreement be reached in Korea in the meantime, there is considerable doubt that it will ever pass. In this connection, Representative James T. Patterson (R-Conn), a member of the Armed Services Committee, told the House this week that "it is shameful that no impetus has been supplied by the leadership to attain this worthy objective." There is, however, a chance that the petition now on the Speaker's desk may get the necessary 218 signatures which would take the combat pay bill from the committee and bring it up on the floor.

General Bradley Retained on Duty—General of the Army Omar N. Bradley, whose two-year term as Chairman of the Joint Chiefs of Staff expires 15 Aug., was nominated this week by President Truman for a second two-year term. Senate confirmation of this nomination is held certain in view of the current emergency.

During recent months there had been frequent reports that the President would retain General Bradley in active service as the nation's ranking military officer.

The composition of the Joint Chiefs of Staff will undergo immediate change as a successor is named for the late Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, generally considered to have been in line to succeed General Bradley as JCS Chairman. Also, there is the possibility that a Marine Corps bill will be enacted providing for membership of the Marine Corps Commandant on the JCS. The Senate version of this bill makes the Commandant a consultant, but not a member of the JCS. As reported by the House Armed Services Committee, the bill would make the Commandant a voting member of the JCS.

Armored Center Commander—Maj. Gen. I. D. White, Chief of Staff of the First Army, has been designated as Commanding General of the Armored Center and Commandant of the Armored School at Ft. Knox, Ky. General White succeeds Maj. Gen. David G. Barr, veteran of fighting in Korea who has been at Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington, D. C. for an extended period of hospitalization.

Cavalry and the Marine Corps—Considerable interest has been aroused by the special course in the use of pack saddles and horses which has been instituted at the Marine Corps Base at Quantico, Va. This interest has been heightened by the Department of the Army's recent report to Congress recommending against the reconstitution of horse cavalry in the Army.

The Quantico Marine Corps course is designed to teach platoon commanders the use of the horse in modern combat. Instruction is given in the tactical use of the packsaddle, care of the animal, riding techniques, tactical employment of animals, and the carrying of ammunition and supplies over rough terrain under combat conditions. The Marine Corps said that the need for pack animals in combat was demonstrated in Italy and Burma during World War II and more recently in Korea. The first class of 25 second lieutenants recently completed the course and a second class with the same number of officers is now in progress.

In the meantime, the Army has reported to the House Committee on Armed Services in opposition to HR 3338 a bill "to reactivate the Mounted Cavalry." The reasons the Department gave for not wanting the bill passed were, first, that it already has powers to do so under the Army organization act of last Congress, and:

"The second reason is that it is believed to be unwise. The decision to replace horse cavalry by motorized and mechanized units was made only after an exhaustive consideration of the missions, functions, responsibilities, resources and requirements of the Department of the Army. Further, this matter was thoroughly studied by boards of senior officers established to consider reorganization of the Army following World War II. The reports of these boards all recommended the discontinuance of the cavalry as a separate arm, and further recommended that the functions of the former Cavalry Arm be assumed by an Armored Arm, and advanced the following reasons:

"The Board believes that the experience of the last two wars clearly indicates that the horse has lost its usefulness on the battlefield. The reconnaissance and exploiting role which, in the 19th century, was carried out by Cavalry still exists but is now carried out by light and heavy armored vehicles or a combination of both types.

"Experience indicates that there are isolated situations where animals, principally pack, are required for transportation. For many years pack troops were operated by the Quartermaster Corps, and it is believed that, in order to keep the science of pack transportation alive, one or two troops should be maintained active in the Quartermaster Corps. It is also believed that the Artillery should maintain, in an active status, at least one Pack Artillery Unit."

"As a result of the Department's study and the findings of the above-mentioned boards, elimination of the Cavalry Arm was recommended to Congress and approved by that body in the Army Organization Act of 1950 (Public Law 581, 81st Congress). The recommendation to retain, in active status, one pack Artillery unit and one Quartermaster pack company has also been approved. At the present time, the 4th Field Artillery Battalion, 75mm Howitzer, Pack, Mountain, and the 35th Quartermaster Pack Company are in active service at Camp Carson, Colorado.

"The third reason is that the Congress abolished the Cavalry as a branch less than a year ago, and that action should not be so soon reversed."

First WMSC Twins—The first pair of twins ever commissioned in the Army Women's Medical Specialist Corps, Jane and Joan Van Scoy of Hampton Bays, Long Island, N. Y. became Second Lieutenants in the Physical Therapist Section of that corps on 20 July, at the 1st Army Area headquarters, New York City. The new officers will leave in September for Ft. Sam Houston, Tex., to attend the Medical Service Women Company Officers course at the Medical Field Service School. They will remain at the school for training in physical therapy and upon the satisfactory completion of this course will be eligible to apply for Regular Army commissions in the Women's Medical Specialist Corps.

Brig. Gen. W. E. Shambora, Surgeon, 1st Army Area headquarters, presided at the induction ceremonies which were also attended by Col. Emma E. Vogel, Chief, Women's Medical Specialist Corps, from Washington, D. C., Capt. Martha Boger, WMSC Procurement Officer for the 1st Army Area, and Mr. and Mrs. Austin J. Van Scoy, parents of the twin officers.

Test New Type Parachute—A new bag-type parachute, designed to minimize landing injuries, was tested last week and this week at Ft. Campbell, Ky., by parachutists of the 11th Airborne Division.

The new chute is four feet wider in diameter than the one now in use and has an added skirt, approximately one foot wide, that extends over the edge of the chute. The most radical change is that the new chute is packed in a bag with the suspension lines stowed on the top of the parachute. When the jumper leaves the planes he pulls the suspension lines out before the canopy, allowing him to fall further from the plane, and eliminating most of the opening shock. The larger canopy also assures a slower descent and easier landing, and the skirt edge is designed to prevent oscillation.

Lt. Col. William Pencak, 11th Airborne Division Parachute officer, was in charge of the tests.

Army PMGO—Col. Harry W. Gorman, MPC, this week reported for duty in The Provost Marshal General's Office and was assigned as Chief of the Training Division. Colonel Gorman recently returned from Eniwetok Atoll, where, as provost marshal of Task Group 3.2, he was in charge of operational security during the atomic tests. He served with Headquarters Eighth Army in the Asiatic-Pacific Theater from 1944 to 1947, and later was assigned to Headquarters Third Army, Ft. McPherson, Ga., as deputy provost marshal.

Colonel Robert W. Reed, MPC, now provost marshal of Lt. Leonard Wood, Mo., has been ordered to a new assignment at The Provost Marshal General Center, Camp Gordon, Ga.

Army-Navy Club Memberships—The Army and Navy Club of Washington, D. C., is calling attention to the fact that all regular officers of the armed services, not above the grade of first lieutenant or lieutenant (jg), will be exempt from the payment of entrance fees if they apply for membership in the Club within 90 days after the date of their first commission.

Col. J. W. Moreau, Secretary of the Club, pointed out that membership provides a ready meeting place in Washington, available rooms, cocktail lounge, barber shop, and all other facilities provided by hotels, and that the Club provides a means of meeting and being with fellow officers of the services.

CNO Defends Navy Ship Complements—In a letter to Rep. Jack Z. Anderson (R-Calif.), Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, shortly before his death, defended the number of personnel who man Navy ships.

The Chief of Naval Operations took exception to an article appearing in the Los Angeles Times which was critical of "wasted men" on Navy ships. Congressman Anderson had caused the article to be printed in the Congressional Record, commending it to the attention of his colleagues "who served in World War II and who know what wasted manpower means."

Admiral Sherman stated emphatically that "the Navy does not feel that it is wasting manpower in its ships." He said that Navy ship complements "are the result of long experience" and that to cut them down "would result in serious inefficiency."

Every man is on board a Navy ship "for a definite purpose," Admiral Sherman said. "It is true that the military ship carries a larger crew than a comparable ship in the merchant marine. Any commissioned vessel of the Navy is manned on the premise that it must be largely self-sustaining and capable of operation over long periods of time." Merchant ships on the other hand, he said, "are contracted for point-to-point transportation and with the expectation that up to 30 per cent overtime wages may be paid the crew."

The Chief of Naval Operations pointed out that Navy ships must have personnel aboard for four specific reasons:

"(1) To accomplish most of the ship's routine maintenance while under way, at home bases, or at isolated anchorages, whereas the civilian ship depends upon shore establishments in port for such work; (2) to do its own stevedoring in out-of-the-way ports and to transfer cargo at sea, a task not required of the civilian ship; (3) to maintain a 24-hour radio watch with facilities for handling coded messages, a watch not required of civilian ships; (4) for medical, supply, added combat equipment, disbursing, military training at sea, extensive damage control, reprovizioning and fueling at sea which are requirements not applicable to civilian ships."

He said that the Navy, in order to discharge its responsibilities, must prepare its ships "to be ordered anywhere, for any length of time" and that they must be "self-sustaining insofar as we can make them so" which "takes more men than for merchant ships."

"The requirements of a civilian ship," Admiral Sherman said, "could hardly be compared to those of similar Navy ships either in peace or war."

AF Dental Service—The office of Air Force Surgeon General has announced selection of USAF dental officers to attend short courses of postgraduate instruction in Oral Surgery at Letterman Army Hospital, San Francisco, Calif., and Walter Reed Army Hospital, Washington, D. C.

Those attending the course at Letterman Army Hospital will be Lt. Col. James P. Williams, Davis-Monthan AFB, Ariz.; Maj. Harold E. Holcomb, Lackland AFB, Tex.; Capt. Roger Hombs, Olathe Naval Air Station, Kans.; Capt. Karl F. Sitterle, Walker AFB, N. Mex.; 1st Lt. John A. Stephens, and 1st Lt. Harold Rabin, Sheppard AFB, Tex.

The officers selected for the course at Walter Reed Army Hospital are Lt. Col. William J. McAllister, Lawson AFB, Ga.; Lt. Col. Daniel W. Tucker, Godman AFB, Ky.; Maj. Milton R. Ellis, Mitchell AFB, N. Y.; Maj. Glenn H. Free, Orlando AFB, Fla.; Capt. Frank H. Ketcham, Mitchell AFB, N. Y.; Capt. Edmund J. McNally, Westover AFB, Mass.; 1st Lt. Gilbert F. Glasson, National Bureau of Standards, Washington, D. C.; and 1st Lt. Thomas E. Sikes, jr., MacDill AFB, Fla.

Infantry Inspector—Lt. Gen. Frank W. Milburn, USA, who has commanded the I Corps in Korea will be assigned to temporary duty with the Office of the Chief of Army Field Forces upon his return to the United States late this month. General Mark W. Clark, Chief of Army Field Forces has announced. Until a permanent successor is named for Maj. Gen. John W. O'Daniel, former Inspector of Infantry at OCAFF, General Milburn will serve as Infantry Inspector. General O'Daniel, war-time commander of the 3d Infantry Division, will command a corps in Korea. General Milburn is being assigned to Army Field Forces for several months' duty to bring to this training headquarters the benefit of a Corps Commander's combat experience in Korea.

Navy "Unsatisfactory Duty" Boards—Recent revisions to the Officer Personnel Act, which permit the Navy to retain twice passed over junior officers and to effect temporary promotions, also provide that Navy selection boards shall report the names of officers whose service is unsatisfactory. However, no such reports were made by Navy boards which recently selected almost ten thousand officers for promotion to lieutenant and lieutenant commander.

The non-statutory selection boards were convened last April prior to passage of the new legislation, but on the assumption that the Navy-requested bill would become effective before the end of the 1951 fiscal year. What the Navy did not know, at that time, was that the law as finally approved by Congress would insist on "unsatisfactory duty" reports.

A Navy spokesman said this week that no effort would be made to go over the recent selection lists and report those officers whose service is considered unsatisfactory, but that future boards will make such reports.

The legislation provides specifically that: "In addition to recommending those officers whom it considers fully qualified for temporary appointment to higher grades, such a board shall also report, from among the officers whose names are presented to it for consideration, the names of any officers of the active list of less than twenty years' service whose records in its opinion indicate their unsatisfactory performance of duty in their present grades and in its opinion indicates that they would not satisfactorily perform the duties of a higher grade."

Officers holding permanent appointments on the active list of the Regular Navy or Marine Corps in the grades of warrant officer and above whose names are so reported, shall be honorably discharged from the service on the first day of the fourth month following that in which their names are reported. They will receive a lump-sum payment computed on the basis of two months' active-duty pay at time of discharge for each year of commissioned service but not to exceed a total of one year's active-duty pay. Officers serving temporarily in a higher grade may elect to revert to the grade and status they would have held had they not been so appointed.

To Honor Walter Reed—Plans have been initiated at the Army Medical Center, Washington, D. C., for observance of the 100th anniversary of the birth of Major Walter Reed, for whom Walter Reed Army Hospital is named. Born 13 Sept. 1851 in the small town of Belroi, Va., Major Reed is best known for his research into the cause and treatment of yellow fever.

■ FT. RILEY, KANS. Col. George Gordon Elms has been named the Assistant Commandant of the Army General School, replacing Brig. Gen. Leslie D. Carter, USA, who has been assigned Chief of Staff, Second Army. Colonel Elms was director of the Department of Resident Instruction of the Army General School, serving under General Carter, before assuming his recently-appointed position.

■ RED RIVER ARSENAL, TEX. On 15 Aug. Brig. Gen. Selby H. Frank, USA, who has been commander of the Red River Arsenal since March 1946, will reach the statutory age for retirement. He will see his last day of active service on 31 Aug.

The general's retirement comes in his 43d year of military service which began at West Point on 1 March 1909. Following his graduation from the Academy, General Frank served the first three years of his regular Army career in the Coast Artillery, transferring to the Ordnance Department in 1916 and has remained in Ordnance since that time.

After the declaration of World War II, the Ordnance Department divided its field operations in the United States into territorial zones and General Frank was named Chief of the 8th Ordnance Zone, Headquarters, Shreveport, La. In July 1943 for the second time in his Army career, General Frank left for Europe to see combat. This time he landed in Africa in the capacity of Deputy Ordnance Officer of the U. S. Lines of Communication. After supporting the invasion of Italy and the operation in Sicily, he moved to Italy as Deputy Ordnance Officer of the Mediterranean Theatre.

Following the August 1943 invasion he went to France as Chief Ordnance Officer of the Southern Line of Command. Here his headquarters accomplished the difficult job of supporting the Seventh U. S. Army and 1st French Army during their advance through France into Germany.

The position of Deputy Ordnance Officer for the European Theatre of Operations was given General Frank in December 1943 and with it came the silver star of a Brigadier General. The promotion came just in time to allow the General to rank his elder son, Selby McKay, who as a member of the Ninth Air Force had attained the rank of Colonel. A younger son, John Harney was serving with the 15th Air Force in Italy at this time. With the return to the United States of Maj. Gen. H. B. Saylor, General Frank became Ordnance Officer of the European Theatre of Operations. It was stateside for the General however shortly thereafter and in the fall of 1945 he left the ETO Headquarters in Paris to take over a staff position in Washington. In March 1946, at his own request, he became the eighth commanding officer of the Red River Arsenal in Texarkana.

General and Mrs. Frank intend to make their home in Texarkana after his retirement.

■ ABERDEEN PROVING GROUND, MD. Col. Samuel Smellow, assistant commandant of The Ordnance School, is leaving Aberdeen Proving Ground later this month to attend a ten-month course at the Army War College, Carlisle Barracks, Pa. Col. Waldo E. Laidlaw is the new Ordnance School head.

■ MITCHELL AFB, N. Y. Maj. Joseph W. Baggs has been assigned to the Manpower Division of the First Air Force. Before taking up his duties here, Major Baggs will take a six weeks' course in management and manpower at George Washington University, Washington, D. C.

Obituaries

Adm. Forrest P. Sherman, USN

Admiral Forrest P. Sherman, twelfth Chief of Naval Operations, was buried with high military honors yesterday in Arlington National Cemetery.

The 55 year old flying admiral died suddenly in Naples, Italy, on 22 July, shortly before he was due to return to the United States after completing negotiations with Spain. He was stricken with two heart attacks, the second of which was fatal.

A four-engine Navy transport plane returned the flag-draped coffin to Washington, D. C., on 25 July, and the body of the youngest man ever to occupy the high Naval office was taken to the Washington cathedral where it lay in state until yesterday.

The Nation's leaders, stunned by Admiral Sherman's death, praised the remarkable military skill which had enabled him to bring the Navy into smooth waters after a turbulent unification storm which was at its crest when he took office slightly less than two years ago. His brilliant Naval career was climaxed in October 1949 when he was vaulted over 10 senior officers to take the Navy helm and restore morale which had been shaken in a series of events ending in the dismissal of his predecessor, Admiral Louis E. Denfeld.

One of the architects of the original unification act, he not only was an outstanding Naval officer, but a distinguished diplomat and statesman.

President Truman called Admiral Sherman "one of this country's ablest officials, counting all those in the civilian, as well as the military fields." He said that the Chief of Naval Operations had "played a prominent part in planning our strategy in Korea. He was able. He was a patriotic American, he was a fine gentleman. The country's loss is great, and so is mine."

Other officials said: A "friend for whom I had the highest respect and admiration... a great personality" whose death is "a definite and serious loss to the nation at this critical time"—Secretary of Defense Marshall; "our country has lost one of its greatest citizens"—General Bradley; "wise and patient leadership, and... selfless dedication to his grave duties"—Navy Secretary Matthews; one of the Navy's "greatest chiefs"—Air Force Secretary Finletter; "his service to the Nation was of the highest order"—Army Chief of Staff General Collins.

Eulogies were also paid to Admiral Sherman on the floor of the Senate and the House of Representatives. Chairman Carl Vinson of the House Armed Services Committee characterized the late Chief of Naval Operations as "one of the great naval leaders of all times."

Born in Merrimack, N. H., in 1896, Admiral Sherman would have been 55 on 30 October. He became Chief of Naval Operations only a few days after he had reached his 53d birthday, the youngest officer ever to be named to the post.

Appointed to the U. S. Naval Academy in 1914, he was graduated with distinction, second in a class of 203, and commissioned as an ensign in June 1917.

In the early stages of World War II, he was a member of the Permanent Joint Board on Defense, Canada-United States, and later served as naval aviation advisor at the Atlantic Conference in August 1941.

Following three months' duty at Headquarters, Commander in Chief, U. S. Fleet, as a member of the Joint Strategic Committee, he assumed command of the USS Wasp in May 1942, and was commanding officer of that carrier when she was sunk by enemy action in the Solomon Islands area in September. For "extraordinary heroism" in that assignment, he was awarded the Navy Cross.

Later, as Chief of Staff to Commander Air Force, Pacific Fleet, he was decorated with the Legion of Merit for coordinating the planning, training and logistic requirements which, according to the citation, "produced efficient naval aviation in the Pacific throughout a vitally important period."

In November 1943, Admiral Sherman was transferred to duty as Deputy Chief of Staff to Admiral Chester W. Nimitz, Commander in Chief of the Pacific Fleet and Pacific Ocean Areas. For services in that assignment he was awarded the Distinguished Service Medal.

In the initial conference with the Japanese at Manila in August 1945, he was the U. S. Navy representative, and he was also present aboard the battleship Missouri in Tokyo Bay when the formal surrender of the Japanese was signed. After the war's end, he served as Commander, Carrier Division One, then as Deputy Chief of Naval Operations for Operations, and immediately prior to his last assignment, as Commander of U. S. Naval Forces in the Mediterranean, a title which was later changed to Commander, Sixth Task Fleet.

Admiral Sherman was responsible, together with Lt. Gen. Lauris Norstad of the Air Force, for the draft of the compromise unification plan enacted in 1947. At the time that he took over as Chief of Naval Operations he said that he was for the new amended unification law one hundred per cent and believed that "the amendments were a logical development of the original draft."

Col. John P. Coleman, President of the Reserve Officers' Association, announced that the ROA's Distinguished Service Citation of outstanding service to the country will be awarded posthumously to Admiral Sherman. He said that the Association had intended to make the award at the end of Admiral Sherman's term as CNO. The Citation is the highest award the Association makes to military leaders and has been awarded only three times.

Lt. Col. John F. Dingee, USAR

Military burial in Arlington National Cemetery, Va., was held 23 July for Lt. Col. John Francis Dingee, USAR, who died in his New York City home 18 July. He was 50.

Colonel Dingee was commissioned a Finance Corps first lieutenant in May, 1942, and assigned in Washington, D. C., to Headquarters, Services of Supply. The following year, he was assigned as chief of the mailing and filing section in the Office of the Fiscal Director (which later became the Office of the Chief of Finance.) He was released from active duty in July 1946 as a lieutenant colonel.

Before and after the war, Colonel Dingee was affiliated with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. At the time of his death, he was superintendent of buildings.

Protection of Industry

Steps to be taken by industry and defense officials for combatting sabotage are set forth by civilian and military experts in a new publication of the Chamber of Commerce of the United States.

In a 25-page booklet, titled Sabotage and Plant Protection, the Chamber combines addresses on the subject from a special session of its recent Annual Meeting.

Frank V. Martinek, assistant vice president of Standard Oil Company of Indiana, Chicago, lists these steps in setting up an effective industrial defense system:

1. Alerting top management of every American industrial plant of the current danger.

2. Taking immediate steps to organize defense procedures.

3. Inclusion of a top executive committee on sabotage, espionage, and subversive activities in every plant.

4. Establishment of a plant control center to serve as a clearing house for gathering, classifying, collating, and evaluating information from all sources within and outside the company or factory.

5. Organization and training of volunteer groups in rescue, first aid, radiological monitoring, and other activities.

Maj. Gen. Francis H. Griswold, Munitions Board's military director of production, declares that enemy-inspired agents, disgruntled employees, and emotionally unstable individuals are a menace to the defense effort.

Alex C. Davidson, who prepared a plant protection manual for American Steel & Wire Co., Cleveland, where he is labor relations supervisor, tells how a company should organize for plant protection with particular attention to developing a manual.

Others whose remarks are included in the booklet are Melvin H. Baker, president, National Gypsum Co., Buffalo, and a National Chamber director, who presided at the meeting; and Richard L. Davies, president, Pennsalt International Corp., Philadelphia, who served as moderator.

INDUSTRY * FINANCE * MARITIME

Small Businesses

The extent to which the aircraft industry depends on small business firms has been outlined in a letter to Senator John J. Sparkman (D-Ala.) by Admiral DeWitt C. Ramsey, USN (Ret.), President of the Aircraft Industries Association.

Commenting on a recent report of the Senate Select Committee on Small Business, of which Senator Sparkman is chairman, Admiral Ramsey indicated that the report was erroneous when it stated that some 50 firms "command almost two-thirds of the dollar volume of defense contracts." He pointed out that the committee had been apprised of what the aircraft industry is doing to spread its production base but the information "apparently was not taken into account" in the report.

Admiral Ramsey said, "The aircraft industry, as of last May, was using 60,851 subcontractors or suppliers", a number, he said, which "has increased since the study was made." Of this number, he pointed out, "approximately 52,200 or 87% are small business firms." He also stressed that "of the total dollar volume of orders received by the aircraft manufacturers, approximately 50% is spent with outside firms" of which "about 60% goes to small business."

Wind Tunnel At Annapolis

A new prototype wind tunnel, to be used for high speed aerodynamical instruction and research, is nearing completion at the Aeronautical Laboratory of the U.S. Naval Postgraduate School, Annapolis, Md., according to the School's Superintendent, Rear Adm. Ernest E. Herrmann.

Ceremonies marking the official opening of the Transonic-Supersonic Wind Tunnels were held on 17 July. The guest of honor and principal speaker was Rear Adm. Calvin M. Bolster, USN, Chief of Naval Research.

AF Storage Program

A new Air Force program, estimated to save $3,000,000 a year, will provide inside storage facilities for tactical type vehicles. The savings will be effected by decreased vehicle maintenance costs prior to fulfillment of war emergency requirements and overseas demands.

The new plan, estimated to cost $2,000,000 annually, calls for preparation for storage, maintenance in storage, and preparation for overseas shipment by commercial contractors of scores of jeeps, vans and trucks used in the transportation of Air Force personnel and equipment.

Previously, these tactical type vehicles being readied for use by overseas units were kept at continental Air Force depots and maintained by Air Force personnel. The Air Force found, however, that no matter how extensive the maintenance on vehicles in open storage, the elements were always ahead and the vehicles were not readily available for combat issue in the event of an emergency. The new plan calling for inside commercial storage prior to overseas shipment eliminates the need for completely overhauling vehicles prior to issue.

New Air Resupply Wing

The Air Force has activated its second Air Resupply and Communication Wing at Mountain Home AFB, Idaho. The wing is one of several being organized and trained in the United States by the Military Air Transport Service for later deployment overseas where they will serve under the operational control of theatre commanders.

These wings will have two major wartime missions—to prepare, reproduce and disseminate psychological warfare materials as directed by the theatre commander, and to effect the aerial resupply of military units.

In peacetime the new wings will serve to augment the air resupply and communications capability of the theatre to which assigned.

Ordnance Test Station

The Ordnance test site at Yuma, Ariz., where summer and desert tests are being conducted by the Climatic Test Branch of Development and Proof Services of the Aberdeen Proving Ground, Md., has been made a permanent testing station.

Lt. Col. Ermal A. Black, chief of the climatic section, is commanding officer of the camp, but will remain assigned to Aberdeen Proving Ground. Maj. Ralph W. Petring, Colonel Black's assistant, has been assigned permanently to the site.

QMC Lab. Progress

The Army has accepted from the Commonwealth of Massachusetts a section of the state-owned shoreline of Lake Cochituate in Natick, to be used as part of the site of the proposed new $11,000,000 Quartermaster Consolidated Research and Development Laboratory.

Keep up with your friends by reading the Army Navy Air Force Journal each week.

Economic Mobilization

Field Economic Mobilization Courses will be presented in 18 industrial centers during the academic year 1951-52 by the Industrial College of the Armed Forces, of which Maj. Gen. A. W. Vanaman, USAF, is Commandant. Courses will be offered in the following locations:

- 24 Sept.—Syracuse, N. Y.
- 1 Oct.—Denver, Colo.
- 22 Oct.—Kansas City, Mo.
- 29 Oct.—San Antonio, Tex.
- 26 Nov.—Louisville, Ky.
- 3 Dec.—Des Moines, Ia.
- 7 Jan.—Indianapolis, Ind.
- 21 Jan.—Newark, N. J.

- 14 Apr.—Portland, Oreg.
- 12 May—Fort Worth, Tex.
- 19 May—San Diego, Calif.
- 9 June—Lincoln, Nebr.
- 16 June—Columbus, Ohio.

The Field Economic Mobilization Course, two weeks long, is a condensed version of the ten-month Resident Course given at the Industrial College of the Armed Forces at Washington, D. C. It is organized to present the problems which will confront the country in a full mobilization of the national economy for war, to show the resources and economies of potential belligerents, allies, and neutrals, and to examine methods and procedures for making the best use of our resources. The approach is entirely educational as the College is not an advisory, planning, or operating agency.

The Course is given to Reserve and National Guard officers of the Armed Forces and to civilian leaders in the fields of industry, education, labor and civic life. Reserve officers who desire to attend apply through military channels to the respective Army Area, Naval District, or Air Force Commanders in whose command the course is being presented; National Guard officers to the Chief, National Guard Bureau. Upon selection, Reserve officers are ordered to active duty for the period of instruction. Civilian participants are chosen by locally appointed civilian committees.

The Courses are presented by two teams of six members each, members to the Civilian-Reserve Instruction Branch, headed by Col. M. G. Brown, USMC, and under the supervision of the Deputy Commandant for Extension Courses, Capt. B. R. Harrison, USN.

Con. Can Buys Plant

Continental Can Company has bought for cash the entire capital stock of the Dixon Manufacturing Co., Inc., of Coffeyville, Kans., contract manufacturers of aircraft components, according to William M. Cameron, vice president of Continental's Central (Metal) Division, who is now also president of this new wholly-owned subsidiary.

The Dixon plant, which comprises a number of buildings aggregating more than 150,000 square feet on the McGugin Air Base, is a major producer of components for the B-47 program, as well as spares for the L-5, B-50 and B-29 programs. Mr. W. O. Dixon, former president, will continue as general manager, as will other operating heads.
